All application materials must be submitted online via the Acceptd application system (<https://getacceptd.com/nasa>).
2. Contestants must submit an entry fee of $45.
All payments must be made through the online application by November 01, 2021.

Contest Rules

The NASA 2022 Composition Competition is offering a call for the creation of a work for SAXOPHONE QUARTET. The piece must be approximately five to ten minutes in duration. The composition must either have not received a premiere yet, or have been premiered between 03/15/2020 and 11/01/21. Compositions premiered before 03/15/2020 cannot be considered. A score and a full set of parts (marked with the premiere date if applicable) must be provided. A MIDI realization or acoustic reading of the work is optional.

Judging

The adjudication committee will conduct a blind review of scores and parts, and the decision of the judges will be final. Applicants should not include personal identification on scores, parts, or the optional sound files. All scores and parts will become the property of NASA and will not be returned. Participants will receive results via email no later than December 31, 2022.

This year's adjudication committee:

- Jennifer Bellor, composer
- Rob Deemer, composer
- Judith Shatin, composer
- Clare Shore, composer
- Jeff Siegfried, saxophonist

The winning composition will be premiered at the NASA Biennial Conference, March 10-13, 2022, at Oklahoma State University. (For more information, please visit www.saxophonealliance.org.) NASA will provide performers for the premiere performance. The winning composer must attend the premiere, and travel expenses will be the responsibility of the winner. Free registration at the 2022 NASA Biennial Conference will be provided. If the winner is a saxophonist, he/she must be a member of NASA.

Winner

NASA assumes no tax liability that the competition winner may incur through the receipt of prize money. Individuals are responsible for reporting prize winnings to appropriate government agencies.
